JOB OPPORTUNITY

PhD CANDIDATE

IN THE FIELD OF

“CITIZENSHIP AND GOVERNANCE IN THE EUROPEAN UNION”

In 2017, the WZB Berlin Social Science Research Center is establishing a new research group, “Global Citizenship Law: International Migration and Constitutional Identity,” which will be led by Professor Liav Orgad, connected to the Research Area Migration and Diversity (headed by Professor Ruud Koopmans) and in collaboration with the Center for Global Constitutionalism (headed by Professor Mattias Kumm).

The project, funded by a European Research Council Starting Grant, is jointly hosted by the WZB and the Robert Schuman Centre for Advanced Studies at the European University Institute (EUI) in Florence, providing the PhD candidate with a unique opportunity to benefit from Europe’s two leading research institutes in the fields of international governance, citizenship theory, and global migration.

The doctoral degree will be awarded in cooperation with one of the Berlin Universities (typically, Free University of Berlin or Humboldt University of Berlin); the call is also open to PhD students at other universities in Germany or abroad who are willing to relocate to Berlin for the duration of the contract. The position is at 65% of the regular working hours (currently 25.35 hours per week), preferably starting on September 1, 2017, for the duration of four years. Salary level is E 13 TVöD (in accordance with German public service collective agreement).

The PhD Research

Global Citizenship Law invites proposals on the nexus between national citizenship and EU citizenship from different perspectives— law, history, philosophy, political science, and sociology. Examples of questions are: What degree of (civic, economic, social, and cultural) integration should a Member State require from a person seeking EU citizenship? Should a “genuine link” to the Union be established through a link to a Member State, under its own definitions, or should there be a common European regime? Should there be a European mechanism for responsibility-sharing? Should the European Union develop common criteria for admission into EU citizenship and/or a common integration policy for newcomers, similar to the criteria for admission of new states (“the Copenhagen Criteria”)? Which lessons can be drawn from the European case for a future global citizenship regime? In essence, Global Citizenship Law invites us to reflect on what it means to be “European” and examine the interrelations between national sovereignty, self-determination, and European governance.

Additional details Additional details on the Global Citizenship Law project are available here.

The fellow is expected to develop original research on “Citizenship and Governance in the European Union” that will result in high-quality publications; contribute to the community life; participate in research activities; and help in the management of the project, such as the organization of workshops and website administration.

Requirements

Researchers who hold a Master Degree in law, social sciences, or political philosophy with excellent results by the time of starting the employment contract and have a demonstrated interest in migration, citizenship, identity, or EU law and governance can apply. Applicants must have excellent writing and presentation skills in English (knowledge of other languages is a plus; English is the working language of the research group). Applicants who have not completed their Master degree by the time of application (March 1st, 2017) should include a statement from their supervisor confirming the expected date for the achievement of their degree.

In addition to the eligibility requirements, selection criteria will consider the applicant’s academic record, research plan, research motivation, previous knowledge and experience in the research areas of the project, and willingness to collaborate with other members of the “Global Citizenship” Project.

Equally well-qualified disabled persons will be given preference. The WZB expressly invites women and people with an immigrant background to apply.

Application Materials

- Curriculum Vitae (maximum 3 pages).
- Research Plan, which should contain a statement of the applicant's ideas on the research questions, theoretical framework, and methodological approach (maximum 3 pages).
- Two Letters of Recommendation (referees can email the letter of reference directly).
- Letter of Motivation, which should describe your career plan and reasons for seeking to participate in the "Global Citizenship Law" research project (maximum 500 words).
- University or College Transcript(s).
- Writing Sample (optional).

Please submit your complete application by email (maximum two PDF files, excluding letters of recommendation) by the closing date of March 1, 2017 to:
